How to maintain your floorboards

Keeping your floors looking day one fresh is easy when you take a few simple measures and follow a couple golden rules!

Protect your floor from furniture

Use rugs in high traffic areas

Wipe up all spillages immediately

Maintain pets

Maintain a comfortable living temperature

Decorate with blinds

Allow expansion gaps

Protect your floors

Leave your shoes at the door

Repair surface scratches

In many instances, floors don't need to be fully restored – they just need a little spruce up. Regular use for all floors and furniture, no matter how carefully we protect them, can result in scuffs and scratches that are unsightly.

Provided the damage is on the surface of the floor, Gilly's Scratch Cover Oil or Wax is a wonderful way to blend and cover the blemishes.

If further restoration is required, please contact Embelton Flooring for advice prior to beginning.

Bring dull floors back to life

If areas of the floor begin to look dull in comparison to the remainder, the use of a Wood Floor Refresher should be considered. Wood Floor Refresher is designed to restore an even sheen to the surface whilst giving added protection against future traffic. Typically, floors maintained using a Wood Refresher can be refurbished in the future without having to be sanded back to bare timber.

Please note: Staircases have a specific requirement for slip resistance and a Refresher should not be used on stair treads.

We recommend using Bona Wood Floor refresher.

Restore Engineered Timber Floors

Regular maintenance of your timber floor and the application of a wood refresher will extend the longevity of your engineered timber floors before a complete refurbishment is required.

Timber can be sanded and rejuvenated with a polyurethane or water-based coating to restore the overall appearance of the floor. Sanding and re-coating of any Embelton Flooring's engineered timber floors should only ever be carried out by a professional flooring contractor. If you are considering refinishing your floor, please consult a professional finishing service or Embelton Flooring for advice.
